Portfolio Comment

Over the past 3 years, the fund return has exceeded the benchmark over all reporting periods. This is largely attributable to the higher returns achieved in global equities and fixed income.

A major portion of the returns achieved can be attributed to the depreciation of the rand over the past year. This decline in the local currency has enabled the fund to deliver stellar returns, especially over the past 3 years. The manager has focused the fund on developed market equity, which has delivered strong performances on the back of sustainable growth in their economies.

The fund has diversified exposures including equity, fixed income, property, commodities and cash. Although cash is delivering very little return, it has helped stabilise the fund when markets behaved irrationally.

The developed markets have shown strong gains in recent months as investors see opportunity in established blue chip companies.

The fund has maintained a conservative investment approach and has been cautious in allocating capital to volatile asset classes. The exposure to commodities, cash and property are based on diversification and additional return sources.
